Dear John:

I appreciate your letter of 16 February 1954
regarding an interview with [redacted] who is very well known here.

My people who specialize on [redacted] matters have had a detailed report from him regarding his recent trip, and I have received the benefit of this report. Under these circumstances, [redacted] would hardly be justified in making the trip to Washington to see me.

The next time you are in Washington, I hope
we can get together.

Faithfully,

Dear John:

I appreciate your letter of February 16
regarding an interview with [redacted] who is very
well known here.

My people who specialize in [redacted] have had a detailed report from him regarding his recent trip, and I therefore do not feel that a conference between us would serve any useful purpose.

The next time you are in Washington, I hope you can find time to give me a call. It has been some time since we sat down and talked a bit.
